RE: The Two Party System

Once upon a time, America's two-party system worked so well that the USA was number one in everything.

It was a display of checks and balances, closely guided by the United States Constitution, that kept the country on the straight and narrow and moving forward.

If you are under fifty years of age you have seldom witnessed our two-party system working as efficiently as it should.

I was not only a witness but also a beneficiary of how our two-party system once worked. The people in charge were men and women of great honorable character chosen from both parties to work hard to find and make decisions jointly to move our country forward.

Compare that plan to what we now see much too often by both parties.

I'm embarrassed to say that we now have important people in both parties that pander to the media, exploit every opportunity to make the opposing party look bad and too often try to please lobbyists, fundraisers and others instead of working together to fix our nation's problems.

The big question is, can the two-party system survive and still work as it was designed to do instead of dividing the country?

The answer to that question is simple. The two-party system will once again flourish and operate efficiently when the American voter demands that it does so.

P.S. I personally tuned into the Republican National Convention as often as possible and will do so next week for the Democratic National Convention as I continue my quest to place my very valuable vote for the most deserving candidates.

Attention smart car shoppers: All of my manufacturers have joined the race for marketshare by offering close-out pricing almost two months early on choice inventory. Look for special pricing, zero percent financing, 20% discounts and zero down leases. We're in your neighborhood.
