RE: Remembering Korea

On June 25, 1950, North Korea invaded a poorly trained and poorly equipped South Korea and quickly overwhelmed our World War II ally.

In September 1950, an amphibious landing at Inchon by US, South Korean and UN troops successfully took back the southern territory and pushed the North all the way back to the Manchurian border.

This amazing victory under General MacArthur's leadership was short lived. President Truman would not allow General MacArthur to wipe out the north's troops hiding out in China.

In late October 1950, the Chinese, along with the North, counter attacked and overwhelmed the United Nations forces without any declaration of war. This warfare lasted until July of 1953, when both sides settled on a demilitarized zone. This ended the war with no peace treaty and both north and south basically settled nothing.

In 1953, this 19-year-old writer was having the adventure of my life, serving aboard the biggest and best aircraft carrier in the US fleet. We were waiting in San Diego for our chance to serve our country and win the war against the radical North Korea and China.

Sadly, the political solution ended our dream of revenge for the injuries and deaths of our South City reservists who lost limb and life in North Korea.

So here we are again in 2017, with the same problem, only worse. With fifty-four years of neglect by every US President after Truman, North Korea is still a major problem.

So the big question is; Do we now have a two-party system who can work together and solve a serious problem like North Korea? This time there is no way out for them. Trump didn't create this issue and neither did Obama.

The blame game cannot be used as an excuse and we the people challenge both parties to do the people's business and solve our problems.
