RE: American Taxpayers are Generous

The U.S. government has promised financial support in the billions of dollars for its citizens of both Texas and Florida and others who are victims of our latest hurricanes.

American tax payers are 100% for using their tax dollars for these honorable causes, no complaints. What we tax payers resent is waste, like spending billions to build roads and infrastructure in foreign countries like Iraq and Afghanistan while right here in America our roads, bridges and total infrastructure is 30 years past due for major repair. That's just a few examples and there are many more.

Some day, on the national scene, our Congress and Senate and local political leaders of every state will realize that we taxpayers and informed voters are now watching closer than ever before how they spend our money.

Americans are generous but hate waste and have seen enough of it by both of our political parties and don't like being 20 trillion in debt.

Take the last 30 years of waste out of our budget and America would already be great and not in debt. It's time for the informed voters to remind every politician that it's definitely not their money and to spend it wisely or suffer the consequences at the polls.

At all Bommarito Automotive Group locations, we run a financially sound ship and that's one big reason why price always sells cars at every Bommarito location, every day.

We're in your neighborhood.
