RE: Swept Under The Carpet

By now, US voters of both parties know that the current US government is addressing 20 to 30 year-old problems that frighten us all. The big question is; Why are we more concerned about problems like North Korea, Tehran, healthcare, decaying infrastructure, tax dollar waste, immigration, military preparation, twenty-trillion in debt, etc., than we were just one year ago?

The answer is simple. Our past government, going back many years, either neglected these problems or, in some cases, like immigration, healthcare and debt, even created them.

So why do we have a US government willing to take on doing the hardest thing there is to do, to fix what is broken? The answer to that question is our electoral process has put people in charge who have had nothing to do with these broken problems.

So now we the people must decide, do we continue to be frightened by problem correction or do we face the facts that we have had too many political leaders that hid these serious problems from us only to make them worse?

We the people have only two choices; continue to sweep these problems under the carpet or bite the bullet and begin repairing what is broken.

A good place to start would be to develop a plan to help our millions of Americans now stuck below the poverty line who are no longer interested in more food stamps. They want a plan that will substantially raise their opportunity for better wages, like education and training, plus job opportunities returned to them that were long ago shipped overseas.

We the people must realize that these problems now belong to us and our future generations, which include our children and grandchildren. We must be very careful not to sell them out for any political party and always make sure our local politicians and our Senate and Congress do their job and only work for we the people, not their political party.

Yes, there is much more difficult work to be done and there is no more room to sweep it under the carpet. This is your last chance to pick your charity and pick your car during our Spirit of St. Louis Sales Event.

Purchase any new or preowned vehicle from Bommarito Automotive Group to receive an entry or donate $10 or more to one of three local charities, Variety the Children's Charity, The Backstoppers or The St. Louis Area Foodbank until January 21, 2018, and you will be entered to win a car, truck or SUV from the Bommarito Automotive Group.
