I want to express my gratitude for all who came out to celebrate with us for our Grand Re-Opening on September 22nd! So many people from our community came out and just had fun!

I want to also take the time to thank the mayor who was here for our ribbon cutting ceremony, as well as, the Shrewsbury Fire Department and others.

Take a look at just a few pictures we took!

And wait until next year when we celebrate our 100th!!!

Thank you again!

The Mazda6 is Mazda's midsize car.

I tested a Signature model with a manufacturers' suggested retail price of $34,750, but the base edition carries a starting price tag of $21,950.

I liked everything from the design of the car to the way it looks and drives.

The Mazda6 is not to be overlooked.

That's my conclusion after spending a few days with the car and driving it hundreds of miles through three states.

The Mazda6 is a roomy, midsize car, but it feels like so much more. That's because its thoughtful design is evident throughout the vehicle, and its refinement feels like a class above.

The Mazda6 competes with other midsize cars like the Honda Accord and Toyota Camry directly, though it distinguishes itself by speaking to driving enthusiasts in the language of "zoom zoom." And that's evident by the way the car drives.

Still, Mazda is a niche player. Mazda sold only 22,618 cars in 2018 as of August, compared to the hundreds of thousands sold by the bigger players, according to sales figures from Kelley Blue Book.

I had the chance to take the 2018 Mazda6 for a spin, and I wound up falling in love.

I tested a Signature model with an MSRP of $34,750, but the base edition carries a starting price tag of $21,950.

EMPLOYEE NEWS

Brandon Middleton
Mazda Technician

veggies and food for the weekend, I couldn't help but stop and stare on the way in and out.

The first thing that struck me is the Mazda6's sculptural beauty. From every angle, the Mazda6 is a looker. At the same time, though, its beauty is not overstated. It doesn't shout or whisper, but confidently proclaims: "Here I am, and I am pretty." The Snowflake White Pearl Metallic paint is quite sharp.

Under the hood was the upgraded engine option: a turbocharged, four-cylinder engine, good for 250 horsepower under ideal conditions.

The transmission delivered that power to the wheels incredibly smoothly, even when the car's "sport" mode was switched on.

The suspension is playing some kind of magic trick. I don't know how, but it absorbs bumps on beaten New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvanian roads with aplomb, and yet in turns it stays poised and confident.

In short, the handling was sharp, and I was instantly confident in the car. I was whipping around turns with ease.

The nearly 15 cubic feet of trunk space had plenty of space for various vegetables and late-summer delights.

The instrument cluster was easy to use at a glance — clean and informative. The infotainment system runs off a central touchscreen. I liked all the physical buttons.

The leather-wrapped steering wheel was one of my favorite parts.

The rest of the cockpit was great, and the Nappa leather seats were extremely comfortable. I didn't have any complaints, even in (literally) hours of Manhattan tunnel traffic. The 11-speaker Bose system blasted out Abba's greatest hits and made them sound crystal-clear.

Going home, the trunk was able to fit in luggage for five human adults.

Bottom line: the Mazda6 is worth a look!

In a microwave, melt chocolate chips with oil; stir until smooth.

Thread two marshmallows onto each pop stick. Dip marshmallows in melted chocolate, turning to coat; allow excess to drip off. Roll in toppings as desired. Place on waxed paper-lined baking sheets; refrigerate until set.

How-To: As your chocolate starts to cool, it may be easier to spoon it over the marshmallows.

Coordinate these treats for any holiday party or get-together by changing the color of your sprinkles. Adding sprinkles
